In summary, a wound treatment combination developed to care for pressure ulcers and other severe wounds, using an unexpected mixture of common ingredients, resulted not only in achieving the intended goals of relieving pain, controlling odor, and preventing infection, but also had the unanticipated consequence of improved wound healing.

Palliative Wound Treatment Promotes Healing | Wounds Research

The wound healing process is not only complex but also fragile, and it is susceptible to interruption or failure leading to the formation of non-healing chronic wounds. Factors that contribute to non-healing chronic wounds are diabetes, venous or arterial disease, infection, and metabolic deficiencies of old age.

Healing is the process of the restoration of health from an unbalanced, diseased or damaged organism. The result of healing can be a cure to a health challenge, but one can heal without being cured. The profession of nursing has been traditionally concerned with matters of healing, whereas historically the profession of medicine has been concerned with curing.
