Due to the variety of shipyards constructing the corvettes, as well as the varying roles the Bathursts were pressed into, there was no true standardisation of armament. Some ships varied significantly from the common armament profile, while an individual ship's weapons outfit could vary significantly for different periods of her career. At one stage, HMAS Geraldton carried six Oerlikon cannons ...

Today, 6 decades later, the U.S. Navy and its hostage-along-for-the-ride, the marines have been hampered by their own narrow, egotistical way of operating from the sea trying to relive only part of what worked in WW2 that gratifies the ego (Seaplanes and LTA Blimps excluded). To patrol the seas for subs, land-based civilian turboprop airliners must foray for thousands and thousands of miles ...

(ed note: This article was written in 1979 and is admittedly a little dated. But most of it is still true.) The Third Industrial Revolution is going to create two areas of concern and interest to military planners in the next thirty to fifty years. One of these is new technology that will create new problems of defense and military operations.
