1. Introduction. The interaction of accounting and gender has been subject to debate for many decades (Hopwood, 1987), and certainly since the inception of the Critical Perspectives on Accounting Journal some 25 years ago, when the editors called for research on the extent to which accounting reinforces or sustains relationships between individuals and groups on gendered lines (Cooper & Tinker ...

Accounting as gendering and gendered: A review of 25 years

Research into the many possible relationships, intersections and tensions between language and gender is diverse. It crosses disciplinary boundaries, and, as a bare minimum, could be said to encompass work notionally housed within applied linguistics, linguistic anthropology, conversation analysis, cultural studies, feminist media studies, feminist psychology, gender studies, interactional ...

Third gender or third sex is a concept in which individuals are categorized, either by themselves or by society, as neither man nor woman. It is also a social category present in societies that recognize three or more genders. The term third is usually understood to mean "other"; some anthropologists and sociologists have described fourth, fifth, and "some" genders.
